

Unlike others who oppose media consolidation for the sake of opposition, I am far more open-minded to the needs of business and economic growth.

However, when a corporate entity like Sinclair Broadcasting takes advantage of its access to public airwaves in a blatant attempt to besmirch the reputation of an honest and respected veteran and member of Congress, the FCC cannot merely stand by and watch.

Sinclair is ignoring federal law, and in essence, laughing at the notion that the body has any authority whatsoever. That is an indecency that should be an affront to every member of the FCC, its board, and the American people.
